"While all US hospitals achieving improvements deserve recognition, The SafeCare Group's Hospital of the Year and those achieving 100 SafeCare Hospitals distinction are leading the way,"

Yisrael M. Safeek, JD
Vice Chairman
The SafeCare Group

"While all US hospitals achieving improvements deserve recognition, The SafeCare Group's Hospital of the Year and those achieving 100 SafeCare Hospitals distinction are leading the way," says Yisrael M Safeek, JD, Vice Chairman, The SafeCare Group. "In a recent OIG Report there were some glaring outcomes of care outliers. The data indicated that infections and readmissions remain significant challenges for hospitals. Healthcare acquired infections continue to be a blight on the nation's healthcare system. There's also the revolving hospital doors for open heart and open joint procedures, as well as for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease."

Despite spending far more on healthcare than other high-income nations, the U.S. scores poorly on many key health measures, including life expectancy, preventable hospital admissions, postoperative complications, and maternal mortality. A recent OIG Report stated gains in patient safety have stalled over the past decade contrary to what the patient safety organizations have been saying.
